BACKWARD DESIGN

"Start with the end in mind." Use learning outcomes and assessments as guides to select the best teaching strategies.

WHEN TO USE IT?

Throughout the design of the course. Keep your outcomes in mind so you know where you are taking your learners. This will ultimately result in a well-thought-out path to get the desired end result.

HOW DO I USE THIS IN MY CLASSROOM?

For each outcome, write an assessment. Then identify what information and skill students need to ace that assessment.

WHY USE IT?

By starting with the finish line in mind, you can design a path that gets students to where they need to go.
